

Court Closes Workers Compensation Loophole for Staffing Companies

April 30, 2013 | Blog | By Martha Zackin

VIEWPOINT TOPICS

- Employment

RELATED PRACTICES

RELATED INDUSTRIES

A recent Massachusetts court decision upheld efforts by staffing companies and workers compensation insurers to close a loophole that allowed staffing-firm employees injured at a client company both to collect workers compensation benefits and to sue the company where they were hurt. Please click here to read a blog entry I wrote for the AIM (Associated Industries of Massachusetts) Business Insider blog.

Authors

Martha Zackin