This week, Congress returns to Washington for its lame duck session with uncertain expectations for what gets done between now and the next funding deadline of December 7, 2018. There are a number of legislative items that passed one chamber and not the other, and watch to see which bills make it across the finish line. Also this week we expect to hear decisions on who will be leading key committees, which will have significant impact on health policy in 2019.
