

Protecting Trade Secrets in the COVID-19 Era

July 21, 2020 | Video | By Adam P. Samansky

VIEWPOINT TOPICS

- Intellectual Property
- Trade Secrets

RELATED PRACTICES

- Trade Secrets

RELATED INDUSTRIES

Image not found or type unknown

Thumbnail

In the second video in a series on trade secrets, Adam Samansky discusses steps companies can take to implement reasonable protective measures to maintain secrecy of information in this remote work environment including confidentiality agreements, trade secret protection plans, and restricting access.

Authors

Adam P. Samansky, Member

Adam P. Samansky is an intellectual property litigator at Mintz. He primarily serves pharmaceutical, medical, high tech, and defense industry clients. Adam handles patent, trademark, and trade secret matters for innovators and investors, and he has a successful record in Hatch-Waxman litigation.

More Viewpoints

The “Perfect Storm”: COVID-19 and Trade Secret Litigation

June 29, 2020 | Video | By Nicholas Armington

Read more