Massachusetts House Leadership Announced, Hinting at Issue Positions

02.27.2015

BY GEORGE ATANASOV, JULIE COX, ANA LOPEZ, PAT REGAN, AND AMARYNTH SICHEL

Yesterday afternoon, House Speaker Robert DeLeo appointed his senior leadership and made assignments to all standing and joint committees. DeLeo kept most of his senior leadership team intact, with Ronald Mariano, Patricia Haddad, and Byron Rushing continuing as Majority Leader, Speaker Pro Tempore, and Majority Whip respectively. Haverhill Democrat Brian Dempsey will also remain in place, serving once again as chair of Ways and Means. He will be joined by Western Massachusetts Representatives Stephen Kulik (D – Worthington), who returns as vice chair, and Benjamin Swan (D – Springfield), the newly appointed assistant vice chair, making the Commonwealth’s western region, which has faced economic struggles in recent years, a strong player in state budget negotiations.

Speaker DeLeo’s leadership announcement comes about a month after Senate President Stanley Rosenberg made his committee appointments, and according to multiple sources close to the Speaker, he continued to make changes to his roster up until hours before making his appointments public. The Speaker’s selections hint at his position on a number of priorities for the session, which according to public statements, include strengthening public transportation and infrastructure, bolstering early childhood education efforts, and continuing the Commonwealth’s battle against opiate abuse.

After high turnover in the House, DeLeo elevated many new faces to chairmanships, appointing over 10 new committee leaders. Lowell Representative Thomas Golden will be taking over the Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy Committee after last session’s chair John Keenan left the Legislature. Energy will be a hot topic this session: Governor Baker singled out Massachusetts’ high energy costs as one of the biggest threats to the Commonwealth’s economic competitiveness, and the Speaker of the House has also identified energy as a priority. Representative Golden has said that he is “keeping an open mind” on matters related to the proposed Kinder Morgan pipeline and offshore wind, two subjects his committee will likely address this session. Golden was most recently Vice Chair of the House Committee on Bonding, Capital Expenditures, and State Assets.

Healthcare will also likely be near the top of the agenda this session, particularly given Governor Baker’s stated desire to make changes at MassHealth, which is the state’s costliest program. In his FY2015 budget fix plan, the Governor tried to gain greater control over MassHealth spending, but the Legislature blocked his move. As the Baker administration forecasts a $1.5 billion gap between projected revenues and spending for FY2016, it is likely that the Governor’s budget, which comes out March 4, will make moves to restructure MassHealth spending. The Governor also recently moved to shake up the Health Connector board, removing all four of former Governor Patrick’s appointed members. In this dynamic environment, Representative Jeffrey Sanchez (D - Jamaica Plain) will take over the Health Care Financing Committee chairmanship from James Welch. Representative Sanchez has declined thus far to forecast how his committee would address the Governor’s efforts to rein in costs at MassHealth. Formerly, Sanchez chaired the Joint Committee on Public Health, where he focused on systematic reforms necessary to increase access to healthcare for underserved communities. Representative Lori Ehrlich of Marblehead will take on the role of vice chair.

Representative William Straus, a Mattapoisett Democrat, will remain as Transportation Committee chair. Straus and his committee will tackle issues of transportation financing and system reform, in the wake of the widespread transportation failures that resulted from the series of winter storms Massachusetts faced this winter.

Representative Alice Peisch, who has supported a modest raise in the charter school cap, will also remain as House Education Committee co-chair. It seems likely that the issue of charter school expansion will resurface as a contentious issue: the Senate's education co-chair is skeptical of charter schools, while the Governor has championed them.

South Hadley Democrat John Scibak will co-chair the Labor and Workforce Development Committee, which will likely become active quickly, as both the Senate President and the Governor have singled out workforce training as an area for early focus.

See below for a full list of the Massachusetts' House committee posts. A list showing House and Senate committee leadership positions can be found here.

ML Strategies will continue to monitor developments on Beacon Hill as the Governor releases his first budget next week and both the House and the Senate begin to focus on their priority agenda items.
